

Land of Joy
Buddhist Retreat Community

Remote Volunteers : an essential support for Land of Joy

In its short ten years since inception, Land of Joy has established itself as an FPMT centre for solitary and group retreat in Europe, offering numerous completion practices to support personal retreat, as well as providing a range of spiritual and secular retreats for the wider community.

Land of Joy relies completely on its team of volunteers who provide support at the centre and remotely.

Our remote volunteers are often people who have a connection with Land of Joy through attendance at one of the FPMT training programmes or visiting Land of Joy to attend group or solitary retreats.

The remote aspect of their volunteering means they offer service with offsite activity.

Land of Joy is currently looking for remote volunteers to support:

- Update and review of the Land of Joy website;
- Social media engagement;
- Copywriting and design;
- Fundraising;
- Help with management of key building projects, including oversight of planning permission applications;
- Support to the development of architect plans;
- Bookkeeping;
- Support to volunteer recruitment.

Being a remote volunteer gives you an opportunity to connect in a deeper way with the community of Land of Joy, as well as to learn more about what Land of Joy is offering.

To apply either email volunteering@landofjoy.co.uk, with a short CV or through our website.
